CHAPTER 1

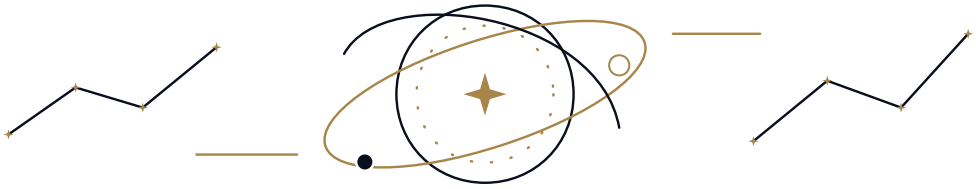
⊙ Solar return

Each year the Sun returns to the point it occupied when you were born, and the chart cast for that moment is known as the solar return. It works like a snapshot of the twelve months ahead: not a script, but a description of the themes, moods and areas of life that are likely to ask for your attention. This report reads that chart alongside your one, so that what you find here always relates to who you already are.

You will read about the rising sign of the year, the Moon, the Midheaven and the houses where the traditional planets fall. Some sections will feel immediately familiar; others may only make sense a few months in. Treat the report as a companion you can return to as the year unfolds, noticing which themes come alive and when. Astrology describes tendencies and invitations, and the choices you make remain entirely yours.

Before going into detail, here is the overall shape of your year. The rising sign sets the tone of how you approach these months, the Moon shows what you will need emotionally, and the Midheaven points to your aims in the wider world. Houses that hold several planets tend to become the busiest areas of life, while empty houses are simply quieter, not neglected. Read this overview first, then let the individual sections fill in the picture as you go.

> This solar return has been calculated for your place of birth, because no other location was provided for the moment the Sun returns to its birth-chart position. The planets keep the same signs wherever you are, and the reading that follows is based on this birthplace chart.



CHAPTER 2

☾ A need for calm and security

Moon in Taurus

The Moon in Taurus brings emotional steadiness to the year. You are likely to need comfort, routine and reliable people around you, and you may find peace in simple things: cooking, gardening, a walk outdoors or an unhurried evening. Your feelings change slowly, which helps you stay calm under pressure. The challenge is clinging to the familiar when change would serve you. Notice when security turns into stagnation, and give yourself permission to update old habits gently. A regular rhythm of meals, sleep and time outdoors will help you stay centred through busier months. Patience with yourself is especially soothing now.

♏ Going deeper, without half measures

Ascendant in Scorpio

Scorpio rising in your solar return gives the year depth and intensity. Surface answers may no longer satisfy you, and you could feel drawn to understand what lies beneath your motivations, your relationships or a situation you have long tolerated. Privacy matters, and you may reveal less while noticing more.

This can be a powerful year for transformation: ending what has run its course, facing a fear or committing fully to something that matters. Emotional honesty in close bonds tends to deepen trust. Shared finances or intimate questions may also come up. The risk is control, either holding on too tightly or suspecting others without reason. Let curiosity replace suspicion and allow change to happen at a natural pace. When you work with this intensity consciously, it can leave you stronger, clearer and freer than when the year began. Trusting the slow, deep process of change helps you most.

♌ Wanting recognition at work

Midheaven in Leo

With the Midheaven in Leo, the year invites visibility and creative leadership. You may be noticed for your talents, offered a chance to present your work or encouraged to take on a role with some prestige. Pride in what you do can fuel excellent results. Share the credit generously and avoid letting the need for approval steer your choices, and the recognition you receive will feel well deserved. A public role, a performance or a showcase of your work could bring welcome attention and pride.

Expressing yourself with more warmth

Sun in the Fifth House

With the solar return Sun in the 5th house, joy and creativity are highlighted. Romance, hobbies, play and time with children can bring you vitality, and you may want to express yourself more boldly. Creative projects are especially favoured. Take some healthy risks for things you love. Just keep an eye on balance, so that the pursuit of pleasure does not push aside responsibilities that still need care. Allow yourself to be playful and spontaneous; your enthusiasm is likely to be contagious, drawing people towards you naturally. A creative hobby could even grow into something more serious with time and care.

☾ Looking for listening in the relationship

Moon in the Seventh House

With the solar return Moon in the 7th house, relationships become your main emotional mirror this year. You may need closeness and reassurance from a partner, and you could be highly responsive to their moods. New connections might form quickly. Partnerships can bring comfort, but also reveal where you depend on others to feel secure. Communicate your needs gently and clearly, and make sure the care you give is matched by the care you receive. Balanced give and take keeps affection healthy. Partners may also need more emotional support from you, so balance attentiveness with care for yourself. Tenderness should flow in both directions in your closest bonds.

☿ Conversations at home and in the family

Mercury in the Fourth House

Solar return Mercury in the 4th house brings family conversations and domestic planning to the fore. You may discuss living arrangements, deal with paperwork concerning your home or work from the house more often. Memories and family stories could fascinate you. Clear, patient communication with relatives can resolve old misunderstandings this year. You might set up a home office or finally sort through boxes of old papers and photographs, finding unexpected clarity in the process. Family history could fascinate you.

♀ Beauty and harmony at home

Venus in the Fourth House

Solar return Venus in the 4th house makes home a place of harmony and pleasure this year. You may decorate, entertain friends at home or enjoy closer bonds with family. Domestic peace becomes a priority. Spending quiet evenings with loved ones can be especially nourishing. If family tensions exist, this is a good time to soften them through patience, affection and small gestures of goodwill. Flowers, soft lighting and shared meals can turn your home into a sanctuary that friends and family love to visit again and again.

♂ Ambition and drive in your career

Mars in the Tenth House

Solar return Mars in the 10th house makes your ambitions energetic. You may push hard for career progress, take on leadership or compete for recognition this year. Results can come through determination. Friction with authority figures is possible. Assert yourself professionally, but choose your battles wisely, keeping long-term reputation in mind. A bold proposal, delivered with preparation and respect, could change your position at work. Strategy works better than force with superiors this year. Persistent effort, combined with diplomacy, can bring visible achievements by the end of the year.

♃ More room and visibility at work

Jupiter in the Tenth House

Solar return Jupiter in the 10th house favours career and reputation. Opportunities for advancement, recognition or a new role may arrive, and your public image can shine. Mentors or people in authority could support you. Aim high in your career, with grounded confidence. Ensure that promises made in public are ones you can keep, to sustain the growth. Public speaking, leadership or a professional qualification could raise your profile significantly this year. Celebrate successes, and remember the colleagues who helped you reach them along the way.

♄ Steadiness in everyday work

Saturn in the Sixth House

Solar return Saturn in the 6th house emphasises work and wellbeing. Daily tasks may increase, and you could be asked to show reliability and diligence. Health habits might need attention. Building sustainable routines brings long-term benefits. Avoid overwork, and treat rest as a responsibility rather than a luxury throughout the year. Check-ups, balanced meals and consistent sleep help sustain your energy. A structured schedule can actually feel liberating once established. Small consistent steps lead to noticeable improvements. Balance effort with proper rest.

⊙ Looking ahead

A solar return chart describes a single cycle, from one return of the Sun to the next. By the end of that cycle you will have lived many of these themes in your own way, and some will have mattered far more than others. That is natural: the chart offers possibilities, and your circumstances, relationships and decisions shape which of them grow.

You might find it useful to jot down a few notes now about your hopes for the year, then read them again in six months and once more near the next return. Patterns tend to emerge when you look back. Whatever the coming months bring, approach them with curiosity rather than worry, and use this report as a gentle reminder of the strengths you can lean on.
